The Plant

Is located in New Wilmington, Pa.,—midway between Mercer and New Castle—sixty miles west of Pittsburgh. It is in the midst of a beautiful, healthful region, in a town of near a thousand inhabitants, with four churches and no saloons.

It comprises four buildings which are adequate to the present needs of the institution. The old College, which in addition to lecture rooms contains the chapel, library, reading room, studio, and society halls; the Science Hall with full provision for teaching the physical sciences according to modern methods; the Ladies' Hall containing private rooms for fifty students and the Gymnasium.

The College has courses in classics, science, literature, music and art; a Conservatory of Music with a competent and conscientious director and pianos for practice; a studio with provision for all kinds of Art Study, China Kiln, etc.; a gymnasium with regular instruction and drill for all who so elect, and an athletic field well adapted to its purposes.

The Personnel.

E may include in this both faculty and students. The men and women in charge of the several departments have been tried and not found wanting. They are graduates of Westminster, Allegheny, Harvard and other colleges. Some have gone abroad for additional study after completing their courses in this country and others have studied in the universities of our own land. They are fully competent to the work of their respective positions and are ambitious to secure the best results for their students in scholarship and character.

The students come largely from the section of country to which the college belongs (from Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania). Pittsburgh and Allegheny send a goodly number. But there are representatives from other cities and states – from Philadelphia and Detroit and Buffalo —and from smaller towns and rural districts of the regions intervening. They come almost universally from Christian families of sturdy stock and sound training.

The Output.

THE first class was graduated in 1854, and every year, since then, with the exception of one, has added to the list of graduates until the number exceeds thirteen hundred. They are found in all professions, though the largest number serve God and their generation in the ranks of the Gospel ministry. They are found in many lands—Egypt, India, Persia, Japan, Siam, China, and the Philippines.

The vast majority of them have done well materially and morally. Westminster is justified of her children.

The Outlook.

PRESENT preparedness for work encourages a hopeful prospect; we may expect that to be done which the college is capable of doing. The past year though full of successful labor has been full of trial. There has been a constant struggle with more or less straightened finances. But the synods which are responsible for its guidance and support are now aiming at better things. The prospect is well under way to raise an additional endowment of $200,000 by the year 1902, when the college will reach its year of jubilee. Friends of the institution will count it a privilege to promote by good words and liberal gifts the success of the present undertaking. With the solid footing thus secured there is every reason to look for a bright and successful career for the institution in the fifty years to come.
